

Acknowledgement

I wish to express thanks to all people/institutions for all sorts of helps received throughout the completion of this research study.

Gratitude is paid to Professor Philip E. Jacob for his advise on the concept and methodology; and to his wife, Betty M. Jacob the International Co-ordinator of the cross-national research project on the community activeness. She personally travelled twice to Thailand trying to obtain funds to support the Thai project.

A special thanks is extended to Dr. Akin Rabibhadana, the director of the Thai Khadi Research Institute. Aside from being the consultant, he also approached the Toyota Foundation which subsequently agreed to partly finance this project.

Acknowledgement is also given to Professor Patya Saihoo, Director, Social Science Research Institute, Chulalongkorn University and Dr. Peter Weldon of the Ford Foundation for their valuable suggestions on measuring the community activeness.

Sincere appreciation must be extended to my team works. They are: Dr. Likhit Dhiravegin, my colleague who assisted in the first quarter in the first quarter of the project. He had to depart to U.S. as a research fellow at Cornell University. Sonth Bangyekhan, assistant professor, Faculty of Political Science, Ramkamhaeng University (former community development officer) and four other community development officers, Ministry of Interior, Mr Kring Makrang, Pongsakdhi Pitak, Somphod Sertnuansaeng and Visuth Panichkul for their help in data collection.

Pimprapai Sinsawasdi, my wife, assisted in data coding, and statistical analysis. She also travelled with me to the research sites most of the time. Mrs. Saijai Sriyaiyan nicely typed the final version of this report. Kiatisakdi Takrud-ngern assisted in using calculator. Most of the data processing is done at the Datamat Limited. The exception is the stepwise regression analysis which is done at Computer Center, Chulalongkorn University.

Finally, special appreciation must be dedicated to the National Research Council of Thailand and the Toyota Foundation for their financial support.
